Commentary: Doing the Best for Your Alma Mater

The large number of activities scheduled for March and April 2013 indicates that our “school spirit” is alive and getting stronger in South Florida. The continued support of these events shows that the philanthropic spirit is deeply ingrained in us and that Jamaican education institutions continue to provide programs that speak to a wide range of philanthropic interests. In short, our Jamaican education institutions continue to make their case for support from us. We are proud to be a part of your effort to assist your alma mater through advertising your events in this newsletter, and we commend you for your effort and the coming months of activity.

Why should we continue to give? Because it make sense!!! Our education institutions in Jamaica need help especially at this time. Furthermore, you are setting the trend for the future and leaving a legacy for current students to follow. All of us are aware that there are students presently attending Jamaican institutions who need help. We get emails every month requesting assistance for students. Our continued efforts will help students enrolled in these institutions to succeed.

By giving, you will make a difference in the lives of students. We know this because we have seen this through your donations to scholarships and infrastructure, and many of us have benefitted from assistance to our alma mater while we were students. We love our alma mater and investing in the institution that helped to make us who we are today, allows us to take part in something that we love; it gives us ownership of our alma mater.

Some of us make the excuse that we do not give to our alma mater because any money we could afford to send would not make any difference whatsoever to the school, which seems to routinely get donations from “the association”. Remember, the association is as strong as its membership and every dollar helps. Others say that they do not give because they have no control over how the money is spent by the association or the school. All too often, well-intentioned donors ill-advisedly rely on good faith when making contributions to their schools only to face disappointment when their support is misused. This however is a signal for you to become more involved and to let your voice be heard. You need to rely on more than good faith promises. Sincerity alone may not be enough and in some cases a written agreement is also not enough. This is a signal for you to become more involved and to let your voice be heard. Again, we applaud you for your effort and pledge our continued support.

The University of Technology, Jamaica (UTECH) has recorded a significant milestone with the award of the institution’s first PhD degree earned by Sean Thorpe, a Lecturer in Computer Security in the School of Computing and Information Technology (SCIT), Faculty of Engineering and Computing (FENC). Dr. Thorpe successfully defended his thesis on The Theory of a Cloud Computing Digital Investigation using the Hypervisor Kernel Logs before a panel of two (2) external examiners and one (1) internal examiner on February 4, 2013 at UTECH’S Papine campus. The high caliber team of examiners comprised, Professor Brian Blake, Dean, Graduate School, Computer Science, University of Miami and Professor Brajendra Panda, Head, Department of Computer Science, University of Arkansas, USA and Dr. Louis Ray Harris, Lecturer, FENC, UTECH, with oversight from Professor Gossett Oliver, Vice President, School of Graduate Studies Research and Entrepreneurship (SGRSRE), UTECH.

The award has come following a three-year journey undertaken by Dr. Thorpe as part of a new model of collaboration that engaged a special team of academicians, specialists and administrators drawn from UTECH and Colorado State University (CSU), Fort Collins, USA. In 2009 Sean Thorpe was accepted by CSU on a scholarship to pursue PhD studies following his successful completion of the Fulbright Visiting Faculty Scholarship award at Harvard University, USA where he explored collaborative research work in cyber security. He explains however, that he was motivated to stay in Jamaica and undertake the PhD program at UTECH to initiate and be part of a history making process that would see both universities collaborating for mutual benefit while creating a model that could be structured for future PhD candidates.

The outcomes of that undertaking have been phenomenal. Dr. Thorpe who also holds a Master of Science in Information Security from the University of Westminster, London, UK notes that he has been happiest with the over thirty five (35) peer-reviewed “published outcomes,” that culminated from the research effort. This PhD program included the preparation and presentation of seminal research papers, for which some have appeared in reputable journals. Some of these research papers were also presented at conferences and workshops across the USA, Europe, Canada, and Asia.

In addition to being a prolific writer, Dr. Thorpe served as a reviewer for the ACM Research in Applied Computation (RACS), Conference Track papers, October 23- 24, 2012; Session Chair for the Seventh IEEE International Workshop on Systematic Approaches in Digital Forensics (SADFE 2012); and Reviewer for the very large databases (VLDB) 2012 Demo Track papers, August 27 - 31, 2012. In 2011 and 2012 Dr. Thorpe obtained three (3) American National Science Foundation (NSF) Travel Grants to support conference presentations in Cloud Computing. He has also been invited as a Technical Program Committee Member for the 17th IEEE Computer Forensic and Software Engineering (CFSE) conference, in Kyoto, Japan, July 22-26, 2013, and the 29th Annual Computer Security Applications Conference (ACSAC), New Orleans, USA, December 9-13, 2013.

The advisory team was led by Professor Indrajit Ray and Professor Robert France, both of the Department of Computer Science, at CSU. These CSU Professors are both renowned for their works in Information Security, Digital Forensics, and Software Engineering respectively. Dr. Tyrone Grandison, former Program Manager, Core Health Care Services (with special focus on Privacy and Security) , IBM Services Research – Silicon Valley and now CEO of Proficiency Labs and Dr. Abbie Barbir, Vice President of IT Security Research, Bank of America completed the distinguished team of co-advisors.
